THE STATE'S DANGER.

The Republican has already shown how the growing influence of Christopher A. Buckley, the blind boss of the Democratic party, has been a factor in state politics, having been in that position engaged in tightening his grip on San Francisco. He had, however, a small contingent of assemblymen from that city, whom his lieutenants had at his suggestion, but he never came into public and notorious personal leadership at the state capital until January, 1887.

From $2,000,000 annual expenditures the appropriations have steadily risen to $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, until the high water mark was reached last year, when Buckley ruled both houses from his throne in the sequestered room, into which he had placed his disreputable and philosophic, Jerry Driscoll, a vagrant, a quack and a rascal. That was the famous pillage of 1889.

Things were carried forward with an high hand and such an utter disregard of decency as to cause even Democrats to stand and wonder. Many of them recoiled themselves with the thought that it would be the last raid. "This settles Buckley," they would say, "he is losing his grip, and he realizes it. This is his last act, previous to his retirement from politics. He is losing his nest, and we shall soon be rid of him."

They honestly believed the plausible stories cleverly set afloat to the effect that Mr. Buckley intended to retire from active politics. There are signs to that effect now. There is a decided revolt within his own party in San Francisco, and he cannot last many years longer.

There is the danger to the state. No one but the signs of the coming disaster were correctly than Mr. Buckley. Does this account for his phenomenal efforts this year?

Those who are in position to know say yes to this question. They predict that the election of Buckley men to the legislature and that means ninety-nine of the Democratic legislative council will be the signal for a raid on the treasury before which "the pillage of '89" will be as the explosion of a bomb to the eruption of Vesuvius.

The generally accepted belief is that this will be Buckley's last effort. He is worth nearly $1,000,000, he is not in very good health and has a young wife. He wants rest, and having forsaken the drive business and the vicious associations in which he was reared, has an ambition to retire to his ranch in Sonoma county and secure a place in society, from which he is forever barred in San Francisco. He has planned this last raid on the treasury before retiring.

It remains with the honest people of the state to say whether or not they want to be pillaged and taxed for the purpose of maintaining a boss.

The escape of the Chinese murderer, Ah Gee Yung, from the county jail was clearly chargeable to incompetence in the management of that institution. The discipline has been lax for some time, and the sheriff cannot escape the responsibility. The effort to hold the sheriff responsible for the suicide of the same convict is not just. It was not in the power of the sheriff and his deputies to prevent that act. They had used due diligence and precaution to guard against it, and are not excusable. The same cannot be said in case of the escape. There is nothing political in this reference. Mr. Hensley's election or defeat will not hinge on this case, but the administration of justice in this county demands that important prisoners committed to the jail shall be kept there. This can be done by a proper distribution of the force at the command of the sheriff, and if he has not enough he should complain to the proper authorities. And so the jail was properly guarded. Yung could not have escaped. That is clear.

DRY THUNDER COLE is arranging a splendid display of Fresno's products at the county board of trade rooms in the depot building. Fresno is unquestionably the home of the raisin in America. In this city and vicinity there are twelve or fourteen raisin packing houses. What would make a finer exhibit than to have samples of each house conspicuously displayed in these rooms? There would doubtless not be the least objection to having each pack duly labeled and credited. The exhibit would therefore prove beneficial not only to Fresno county, but to each and every packing house represented therein. Can not each firm come forward with an attractive exhibit and donate it to the board?

WILLIAM CORDILL is welcoming to Fresno the new lessee of the Hughes hotel, the old residents of this city have not seen Thomas E. Hughes & Son, the proprietors, yield up its management without regret. The names of the proprietors have long stood as synonyms for enterprise and liberality, especially in whatever relates to the development of Fresno and Fresno county. Many land-earned dollars have been spent in the entertainment of visitors, who wished to see our vineyards, without a thought or hope of direct returns. It is largely the action of a few such men as these that has built Fresno up to what she is today.

DECIDEDLY the largest number of Fresno's citizens favor any reasonable law, or an enforcement of such law, that will keep our city or wickedly mischievous boys off the streets at night. The question is as to the best method of accomplishing results. On this subject there is not unanimity. The agitation of the question, however, is the productive of good.

With business interests, political excitement and criminal law in court there is enough to occupy one's attention, but voters should not forget that, on next Wednesday, October 23rd, an election will be held here to decide on annexing certain additions to the city. The additions will receive large and direct benefit from annexation.

The famous Leland hotel in Syracuse, N. Y., which was consumed by fire on Wednesday night, proved the funeral pyre of many people. The awful loss of $1,000,000, the burning of large hotels could lead one to adopt a new system of construction for hotel buildings.

OSCAR WHITMAN, the Nationalist candidate for congress in this district, has issued a challenge to Steve White for a joint discussion of the issues of this campaign. Mr. White cannot ignore this challenge. What has he to say?

THE COST OF BUCKLEYISM.

Until the election of Governor Bartlett in 1886 Chris. Buckley, the boss of the Democratic party, had not been much of a factor in state politics, having been in that position engaged in tightening his grip on San Francisco. He had, however, a small contingent of assemblymen from that city, whom his lieutenants had at his suggestion, but he never came into public and notorious personal leadership at the state capital until January, 1887.

The election of a United States senator was the plum that attracted the boss's greed. Two rich men were candidates. The choice lay between George Hearst and Francis G. Newlands. Those who witnessed that contest know how the boss wavered and "his men" went to Hearst at the eleventh hour, after Buckley had a protracted and unattractive interview with Mr. Newlands at the Golden Eagle hotel.

Thenceforward he was the active director of the legislation, and "the San Francisco contingent" became a disgrace to the state. They were avaricious boodlers. Many did not attempt to disguise the fact and the fact insurance companies built the pilot bill, the Colusa county division and others gave him ample scope to gather in shillings and to give him practice as a tactician on a broader field.

It was not until 1889, however, that Buckley became the real owner of the state. During that session he filled every office of consequence in both houses, placing George Taylor in the office of sergeant-at-arms of the senate and electing his trusted lieutenant, guide and interpreter, Jerry Driscoll, as sergeant-at-arms of the assembly.

The ante-rooms occupied as offices by both of these men were converted into a harem, where straight liquor was dispensed at the regular market rate in opposition to the gin mill in the basement of the capitol, which latter was called "the well" in contradistinction from the Buckley stables upstairs.

The offices of these sergeants-at-arms became the headquarters of Buckley. There he sat on a throne and ruled the legislature as freely as any emperor ever ruled his empire. It was shame-faced exhibition of political bossism. It was all decent men hang their heads in shame. Vice and corruption stalked boldly through the lobbies and corridors of the capitol. Bad men and depraved women comprised the Buckley contingent and contaminated the entire atmosphere. Men struggled their shoulders and declared in dark corners that it was a shame, but they did not dare antagonize the evil. It was enough to cause the goddess of liberty over the dome of the capitol to hang her head in sorrow over the degeneracy of the race.

While this gang of bondholders, prostitutes and rascals controlled the capitol neither Mr. White, Mr. Guadalupe or any other Democratic member of the legislature dared to raise his voice and demand that the vice rascals should be driven from the legislative halls. By their silence they sanctioned and counseled the acts of these men who now have held so firmly on the throat of the Democratic party that it cannot live unless it does his bidding. The word of his associates was law and no Democrat dared oppose them for fear of gaining the ill will of the "blind white devil," as the Chinese apply designate the ruler of the California Democracy.

Having been so successful in handling the legislature he has now taken a hand in making governors. At the San Jose convention he was the balance of power. None of the candidates could be named without his sanction. He nominated B. P. Bond.

Chris. Buckley is in politics for money. He has never placed a man in office without receiving a consideration, either coin down or control of the man placed in power. He is at the height of his career. He has not changed his policy. What was the consideration for Bond's nomination? Was it cash down or is he to have free swing at Sacramento during the next four years?

The people of the state have been thinking over the conundrum. They have not been able to solve it, but they have come to the non-negotiable conclusion that too many dangers to the state are involved in giving Mr. Bond a trial. The fact that Mr. Bond owes a political debt to Buckley should be enough to defeat him and any Democrat feel this strongly. A vote against Bond is a blow against Buckleyism.

As Buckley developed from a low drinker and procuier manager into the ruler of the city of San Francisco, the annual expenses of the city increased alarmingly, the increase being punctuated by the various stages of the boss's progress to power.

So can Buckleyism be traced on the books of the state, a fact to which the superlatively honest man, Controller Dunn, has not called attention in his various voluminous reports.

The new constitution provided that the first session of the legislature after its adoption should cover a period of one hundred days. In order to give effect to the new system adopted by the people, extraordinary expenses were imposed on this session of the legislature, which was Republican, and had no boss. The message of the Governor, Geo. O. Perkins, contained suggestions of vital importance and it devolved upon the legislature to carefully investigate and patiently consider many intricate questions. Yet this session with its increased responsibilities only expended $27,000 for contingent expenses and $12,000 for pay of officers and clerks. The aggregate was $39,000.

During the last session, when Boss Buckley held high carnival at the capitol and issued his decrees from the sergeant-at-arms's room, extravagance ran riot. The Democratic majority in both houses meekly obeyed his commands, and the officers were promptly quibbled. Three separate bills were passed for the contingent expenses of the assembly—one for $30,000, another for $24,000 and the third for $18,000. Two appropriation bills for clerks and officers of the assembly were passed—one for $3000 and the other for $5000. Another bill appropriating $17,000 for the contingent expenses of the senate was passed. The sum of $6500 was also appropriated for the clerks and officers of the senate. The recklessness and extravagance reached the enormous sum of $100,000 for a sixty day session.

Under no boss a Republican legislature would have been able to do this.

THE REMOTE TELLER all the laws at a hundred-day session and spent but $30,000. Buckleyism required $100,000 in sixty days.

The increase in the general expenses of the state marks the advent of Buckleyism with equal distinctness. The Republicans, under Governor Perkins, wiped out all Democratic deficiencies, and the expenses were within $5,000,000.

Governor Stoneman attempted to maintain an economical administration, and during his first year, the thirty-fifth, the expenses were $3,302,000. The thirty-sixth year they amounted to $3,203,000.

It was now that Buckley appeared on the scene. It was during the 37th fiscal year that Buckley's lieutenants first appeared at Sacramento. The expenses went up to $4,119,000, and about the same figure was maintained the following year, the exact figures being $4,031,442.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

On another page to-day's issue will be found an exhaustive review of what is known as the McKinley tariff bill, which passed congress the present month, just before its adjournment. The comparisons presented are clear and concise. A man who has made no special study of the tariff can understand them almost as well as a political economist. Democrats as well as Republicans are earnestly requested to read the features of this bill. It is a Republican measure and has been severely denounced by many of the leaders of the Democratic party. In this state particularly, political speakers of that party have attempted to hold it up to derision, saying that it is hostile to the agricultural interests of California. This is, of course, a snarl for political effect, but a candid reading of the measure will show that California receives a large and direct benefit from it, possibly more than any other state in the union.

The bill also does as much for Fresno county as for any other county in California. Let us look into it and see. Fresno county is the center of the raisin industry of America. For decades Spanish raisins drove the American raisins out of market. The latter could not possibly live under a free trade system. Finally a law was passed imposing a duty of two cents a pound on all foreign raisins brought into this country. This immediately raised the price of raisins to a point where the California vineyardists were able to compete with those in Spain, which they have since done successfully. The new bill increases the duty on raisins to two and one-half cents per pound. In other words, the raisin producers of this and neighboring counties receive exactly two and one-half cents more per pound for their products than they would without this protective tariff.

The opponents of the tariff bill would state as arguments against it that it raises the price of the raisin to the consumer, but will any Democratic vineyardist in Fresno county come boldly forward and say that the duty on raisins should be abolished. The plain facts are that if the raisin was on the free list it would be absolutely impossible for the vineyardist to pay his laborers but a fraction of what he now pays them. Out two and one-half cents from the value of each pound of raisins and Fresno vineyardists would be obliged to plow up their vines or employ laborers at one-half the wages now paid.

Continuing in this line we think it fair to assume as proved that as regards the article in question the high tariff means prosperity to the producer and the laborer. Now all that is necessary to solve the problem is to show that the tariff protects the consumer and is of direct benefit to him. Take the farmer who eats the raisin. Under this new bill he receives a far greater price for his farm products than he would under a free trade system. On barley there is now a duty of 30 cents a bushel. That is, every farmer or shipper in Canada, England, Australia, or other foreign countries must pay 30 cents extra per bushel to get his product into this country. This is virtually a prohibitory tariff to foreign producers and immediately raises the price of barley to the American farmer. The same can be said of other farm products. Under the new bill there is a protective tariff of 15 cents per bushel on oats; 25 cents per bushel on wheat; 6 cents per pound on butter and cheese; 5 cents a dozen on eggs and 25 cents per bushel on apples. With these increased prices the farmer is enabled to pay his laborers a comparatively high rate of wages, pay for his property and manufactured goods, and at the same time deposit money in the bank.

The same rule holds good in other lines of business. The American manufacturer, who is protected by a wise tariff, is enabled to employ laborers and at good wages. These laborers live on towns and cities and create a splendid market for merchants, mechanics and especially men who make their living from products of the soil.

Study this new tariff measure as one will, the conclusion must almost necessarily come home to every candid mind in the nation, and especially to those in California and this immediate section of the state that protection to American industry is the life of our country—that it is as necessary to our industrial life as the protective framework surrounding the vital organs is to human life.
